Druid turned Necromancer, Radulos was grateful for a safe place to perform his grotesque experiments combining plants with undead creatures and his loyalty to Lord Idris Daemon was unmatched. Thanks to the frequent use of the Clone spell, Radulos also enjoyed outings into dangerous places to find the best corpses and rarest plants.

Personal history

Radulos was born into the Circle of Druids who follow the calling of the Twilight Realm, and are devoted to The Mother. While he grew up with the ideals of the Druids drilled into his head, he was filled with burning curiosity with the undead. His circle, dedicated to the destruction of all undead creatures, would not entertain his curiosities when he brought them up and what friends he did have soon left him.
When he was eighteen he discovered an amulet while cleaning out a cursed graveyard and hid it from his teachers. Through it he began to learn of the magic he craved, and he twisted it to his will. He created his first undead a few months later. He was discovered, and banished for this crime.
